A PICTURESQUE BUT UNTRUTHFUL TALES BOW A NUMANITARIAN WAS DEPICTED IN RED KNEE-BREECHES THIRSTING FOR BLOOD.

The four acres of land lying along the Passaic River, near Chatham, N. J., that formerly belonged to Ezra Tallman and now belong to nobody knows who, seem likely to be an object of interest to people in that neighborhood for a little time yet before the matter fully settled. Accounts have appeared in the Newark and in some New-York papers of the alleged strange conduct of George Shepard Page, who has held the land up to within a short time by virtue of a case granted him in 1884 by Mr. Tallman. Tallman has been declared to be insane, and last September a sale of the piece of land in question was ordered for It was bought by William A. Martin, of this city, who has a summer home near it and not far

The published accounts state that Mr. Page resented any interference with the rights guaranteed by his lease, and that he appeared at the railway station at Chathan last Wednesday, dressed in a coat and knee-brooches of red velvet, and armed with a pistol of terrible size and threatened to shoot Mr. Martin when he came on the train from New-York. Mr. Martin, however, did not come. Mr. Martin said yesterday that Mr. Page had no valid claim whatever to the land. His lease had never been recorded and was given by an insane man, who was not competent to give a lease anyway. Moreover, the lease required Mr. Page to put a fence around the land and to keep it in repair, and he never had built any fence unless within the last few weeks. He did not know whether the stories about the pistol and the threats and the placing by Mr. Page of armed men to guard the land were true or not, as he knew of them only from the newspapers. The right to the land was not before the courts now, but it would be if Mr. Page opposed his occupying it. Mr. Martin said he had not been to Chatham lately, because he had been busy and had not been well, but he should not hesitate to go when he got ready.

Mr. Page was not in town yesterday, but his secre-tary, C. H. M. Rose, was willing to talk about the tary, C. H. M. Rose, was willing to talk about the matter. He said that Mr. Taliman was not insane, and had not been declared insane when he gave Mr. Page possession of the land, and Mr. Page was only defending his own property. The story of his threatening to shoot Mr. Martin was all a lie. He went to the village in his usual hunting dress, but it was not to meet Mr. Martin, and the men with guns, supposed to be guarding the land, were his friends, whom he had invited to visit him for target practice. Mr. Rose said that if the Newark paper did not retract its statements or publish a contradiction from Mr. Page, it would be sued for libel. Mr. Page had done a great deal of good in Chatham, he had established a Sunday-school and mission which had grown into the Stanley Congregational Church, and he had recolutely opposed the rum shops. This had made him enemies who had started all these stories. Mr. Rose did not know that Mr. Page would be anxions about it, but though his friends would be glad to have a good paper make a plain statement of the truth of the matter.

plain statement of the truth of the matter.
